HISTORY

The Law Enforcement Career Camp was originally established in 1970 through the efforts of Indiana Kiwanian Erine Alder, who was a state policeman by profession. The original camp was established for high school students who were interested in pursuing a career in law enforcement.

The first camp in our Washington State was held in 1977. Unfortunately, records for this camp seem to have vanished. However, since that time, we have been fortunate to keep a photographic history of most camps class photos, which are available to view on the WSP website at: wsp.wa.gov - Outreach – Kiwanis Youth Law Enforcement Camp – Photo Gallery and History.

The statistics of the original program are impressive, as well as rewarding. Out of the original 1977 class, 20 of the 81 camp graduates became police officers, and another 30 began studying criminal justice.

The North Thurston Kiwanis Club in Lacey, Washington, served as the original “host” club for the camps, and John Sheldon was the first camp coordinator. For about the first nine years, the camps were held on the campus of St. Martin’s College in Lacey. At that time, the Washington State Criminal Justice Training Commission was leasing buildings and facilities from St. Martin’s College, and training actual police officers with their “Basic Law Enforcement Academy” at that site.

Around 1985, the camp developed a partnership with the Washington State Patrol and began holding the camp each summer at the WSP Training Academy in Shelton, Washington. The Kiwanis clubs of Mason County began to co-host the camps.

In 1997, John Sheldon retired from his leadership with the camp and turned over the Kiwanis leadership of the camp coordinator to George Fisher, a retired FBI Agent and member of the Hood Canal Kiwanis Club.

In 2007, George Fisher retired from his full time leadership as the camp coordinator, and turned over the Kiwanis leadership of the camp to the Olympia Kiwanis Club. Derek Valley, Lt. Governor for Thurston-Mason county Kiwanis clubs took on the leadership responsibility as the camp board transitioned during 2007-2008 away from George Fisher.

While George Fisher remains active on the camp board of directors, Mark Couey, a retired Captain with the Washington State Patrol and currently the Director of Investigations for the Office of the Insurance Commissioner, became the president of the camp’s Board of Directors. Jan Britt, a retired Captain of Liquor and Tobacco Enforcement with the Washington State Liquor Control Board began acting as the camp coordinator in 2008.

OBJECTIVES

The Washington State Kiwanis Youth Law Enforcement Camp is now a joint effort by Kiwanians and the Washington State Patrol, together with other local, state and federal law enforcement agencies. It provides selected high school juniors and seniors with a one-week experience that is oriented towards a program of the basic elements, responsibilities, and mechanics of the criminal justice system. Emphasis is placed on the role of the police officer in that system.

Student “cadets” are taught integrity, leadership, discipline, and teamwork.

As law enforcement agencies are finding it more and more difficult to recruit employees, this also provides a public service to the community by encouraging youth to look toward the future and a career in the public safety arena. It also provides youth a good look at what a law enforcement career will be like in a variety of fields.

INSTRUCTORS / STAFF

Instructors for the variety of classes and “counselors” who live at the WSP Academy with the cadets during the camp are volunteers from federal, state, city, and county law enforcement agencies. Many provide classes as part of their normal, full time job requirements. Others volunteer on their own time.

Some of the instructors and counselors are even previous graduates of the Kiwanis Youth Law Enforcement Youth Camp (names are highlighted).

Staff / Volunteer List: (Note: Highlighted staff are former camp graduates.)

2007	27	25	25	20	5	19	6

In 2013 we received 27 applications. Three were not accepted because they did not meet the minimum GPA requirement. This allowed us to proceed with a class of 24 student-cadets.

Each student attending the camp is provided with: 2 t-shirts, 1 shorts, 1 baseball cap, and 1 hooded sweatshirt, a water bottle, together with a 3 ring binder, paper, and a pen.

As part of their course work, cadets write a thank you letter to their sponsors during the camp. Students are also encouraged to contact their sponsoring Kiwanis Club or organization to give an in person presentation about their camp experience.

Washington State Kiwanis Youth Law Enforcement Camp 2013 Annual Report

Students are taught how to maintain their room, including making a bed to specific standards. Counselors inspect the rooms twice a day or more to insure the rooms are maintained according to standard. Students work as teams to insure all beds are properly made and all rooms meet the set standards. This is part of the instruction for discipline and teamwork.

PUBLICITY

Each year, the counselors create a disc of photos from the camp, which is mailed out after the camp to the students. Photos of individual students are also e-mailed to the student directly. This video "scrapbook" can be used by students, instructors, counselors and other Kiwanians to provide information about the camp at school, local Kiwanis clubs, or other speaking engagements.

Semi-Annual Newsletter: In 2013, 2 issues of the KLEYC NEWSLETTER were published in February 2013 and September 2013. Copies are sent by e-mail to persons who have indicated an interest in the camp, together with former students, instructors, and volunteers.

High School Counselors: E-mails are sent to high school counselors throughout the state about the camp in February of each year.

WASPC: The Washington Association of Sheriffs and Police Chiefs send an annual e-mail notice to their members about the camp.

Kiwanis:

- Booth at Zone D Kiwanis mid-winter conference.
- Booth and presentation at Pacific Northwest District Kiwanis convention in SeaTac, Oregon.
- Programs provided to local Kiwanis Clubs
- Booth at Shelton High School Career Fair

Press Releases:

- WSP Issued a Press Release in January about the camp
- Articles published in The FTE Magazine and The Builder Magazine

ADMINISTRATION

The Washington State Kiwanis Youth Law Enforcement Camp became a 501c3 tax exempt foundation in 2001. Since then, annual reports are filed with the IRS and the office of the Washington State Secretary of State to continue the charity status of the corporation.

Board Meetings:

Board meetings are not regularly scheduled, but are called when necessary with 2 days notice by an officer of the Board. In 2011, the Board was expanded to include 9 officers and directors. Five are required for business action to be taken.

Year	Number of Board Meetings Held
2013	4
2012	5
2011	5
2010	6
2009	7
2008	5
2007	9

CONCLUSION

2013 was another successful year for the Kiwanis Youth Law Enforcement Camp. Funding is always a struggle, especially in these tough economic times. We were fortunate to obtain some new sponsors to help defray the costs of students who could not find full support from local Kiwanis Clubs.

We plan to continue to identify and encourage our high school youth to consider a career in public service and law enforcement.
