WSP District 8 Sees Overall Reduction in DUI, Speed and Fatal Collisions

Last year, the Washington State Patrol saw a significant reduction in the number of speed and DUI related collisions throughout District 8.

The detachment offices situated along the Olympic Peninsula began a new tactic last year by first identifying areas that were in need of a stronger level of enforcement. Troopers, along with the district's command staff, identified these areas by studying data spanning over a three year period. By looking at statistics such as fatal collisions, DUI arrests and speed collision data, areas of interest were identified. In 2009, troopers conducted weekly saturation patrols – a high visibility emphasis with teams of several troopers – in these areas using proactive law enforcement. These saturation patrols increased violator contacts by 7% over 2008.

At the conclusion of 2009, collisions involving DUI drivers were down by 8%, speed related collisions were down 10%, and although the districts fatal collisions remained the same as 2008, we are down 30% from our six year average. Below, the numbers are separated by county.

Clallam/Jefferson Counties

- DUI related collisions were down 15% with 44, as compared to 52 in 2008.
- Speed Related Collisions were down 18% with 126, as compared to 153 in 2008.

Mason County

- DUI related collisions were down 45% with 45, as compared to 82 in 2008.
- Speed related collisions were down 39% with 67, as compared to 109 in 2008.

Kitsap County

- DUI related collisions were up 23% with 117, as compared to 95 in 2008.
- Speed related collisions were up 10% with 273, as compared to 248 in 2008.

Grays Harbor County

- DUI related collisions were down 21% with 37, as compared to 47 in 2008.
- Speed related collisions were down 12% with 69, as compared to 78 in 2008.

Pacific and Wahkiakum Counties

- DUI related collisions were up 23% with 27, as compared to 22 in 2008.
- Speed related collisions were down 29% with 53, as compared to 75 in 2008.

Statewide, 2009 was the safest year in traffic since 1955. For statewide information here is a link to the Washington Traffic Safety Commission's News Release:
